Read the given passage and answer the questions that follow.

There are few events that are regularly awaited with such interest every year and fewer which make news on account of their timeliness or lack thereof, such as the southwest monsoon. Fewer still that so deeply impact the lives and livelihoods of 140 crore plus Indians.

According to available records that span 150 years, the earliest monsoon was May 11 in 1918 and the most delayed was the one landing on June 18 in 1972 with instances of such deviation being few and far between, yet everyone, from the data crunchers of the Prime Minister's Office and Niti Aayog to the lonely farmer in the rain-fed farmlands of Malappuram in Kerala, are all ears for the official forecast by the India Meteorological Department (IMD) of the event. This year, it was supposed to be late, and true to predictions, landed on June 8 instead of the usual June 1.

As Alexander Frater documented in his 1990 travelogue Chasing the Monsoon, the advance of the monsoon follows a steady pattern by which it covers the whole of India over one-and-a-half months, before withdrawing by October by way of the northeast monsoon. In the process, it waters India's vast agricultural fields, replenishes reservoirs and aquifers and produces electricity. While droughts grease palms of the few high and mighty, a good monsoon cheers every segment of society and economy.

Monsoon rains are important for the country as rain-fed agriculture makes for about 51 per cent of the country's net sown area and accounts for nearly 40 per cent of the total food production. The bad news refers to the reports of El Niño impacting monsoon this year. This could prove punishing going forward, as nations have refused to recognise the urgency of global warming and climate change. It's time policymakers started designing ways to protect the vast majority of the population. It is not for no reason that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru called for technological and engineering solutions. These are more urgent now.

Read the given passage and answer the questions that follow. Motivation is something that cannot be understood with words but with practice. It means to be moved by something so strongly that it becomes an inspiration for you. Furthermore, it is a discipline that helps you to achieve your life goals and also helps you to be successful in life. Besides, it the most common practice that everyone engages in. Whether it is your boss in office, or a school teacher, or a university professor --- anyone may motivate others in one way or the other. Motivation is a strong tool that helps people to get ahead in life. In order to be motivated we need a propelling tool or goal that keeps us enthused and moves us forward. Also, it helps us in becoming progressive both physically and mentally. Moreover, one's goal need not be too big or a long- term one. It can be small but empowering. Furthermore, you also need the right mindset to remain motivated. Sometimes you need to push yourself towards your goal. No one other than you can push you towards your limit. Also, you should be ready and willing to leave your comfort zone because your true potential is going to be revealed only when you leave your comfort zone. Although there are various types of motivation, according to me, there are generally two types of motivation---they are self- motivation and motivation by others. Self-motivation is the power of someone to stay motivated without the influence of other situations and people. Furthermore, self-motivated people always find a reason and the strength to complete a task. Also, they do not need other people to encourage them to perform a challenging task. The other type of motivation happens because of others. This motivation requires help from others as the person is not able to maintain a self-motivated state. In this, a person requires encouragement from others. Also, he needs to listen to motivational speeches, have a strong goal and most importantly, be inspired.
